NVTC International Committee Annual Holiday Reception

For more than 30 years, Conservation International's mission has been to build a healthier, more prosperous and productive planet. They achieve this through scientific research, innovative policies, and partnerships with companies, communities and countries. Through its partnerships with cutting-edge technology companies and universities, Conservation International is using novel technological solutions to address real-world problems. From combating climate change to promoting sustainable agriculture, come hear how Conservation International combines technical, engineering and science-based solutions with nature-based approaches, and how they use data to enable evidence-based conservation.

Speakers

Bethany Haines – Chief of Staff
